2. Training and Development: Providing employees with the necessary skills and knowledge to perform their jobs effectively. This can include orientation for new hires, continuing education programs, and professional development opportunities.
3. Performance Evaluation: Assessing employees' job performance to provide feedback, identify areas for improvement, and make decisions related to promotions, bonuses, and terminations.
4. Compensation and Benefits: Determining and administering salaries, bonuses, and benefits packages to attract and retain top talent. This can include health insurance, retirement plans, and other perks.
5. Employee Relations: Managing relationships between employees and the law firm to promote a positive work environment. This can involve resolving conflicts, addressing grievances, and fostering a culture of teamwork and collaboration.

3. Performance Reviews: Conducting regular performance evaluations to assess employees' progress toward their goals, provide constructive feedback, and set expectations for future performance. This can help identify high performers and areas for improvement.

4. Compensation Benchmarking: Comparing the law firm's compensation and benefits packages with industry standards to ensure competitiveness in attracting and retaining top talent. This can involve conducting salary surveys and adjusting pay scales accordingly.

3. Workplace Stress: The high-pressure nature of legal work can lead to burnout and stress among
